

Robert Jones

For the last 20 years, Robert has worked as a special education teacher in both public comprehensive and charter schools grades K-12. Robert holds a Master's degree in Educational therapy and a California Education Specialist II Credential. He is a professional member of Association of Educational Therapist and provides educational therapy for children suffering from Cognitive Late Effects, particularly for children who have undergone treatment for cancer and traumatic brain injury. In addition, Robert has provided services to students with autistic behavior, utilizing the Applied Behavior Analysis interventions approach. He also works with children with learning disabilities, emotional disturbance and conduct disorders.

Robert's philosophical beliefs are based on building a positive learning environment that is backed by positive and practical intervention models that can be applied in not only the educational setting but in the home setting.

Robert is married to his wife of 37 years who is also a special education teacher. They have 3 daughters and five grandchildren.
